They are classic ship sculptures created by silversmiths used in the medieval times for royal banquets. The sculptures doubled as condiment and spice holders. They were traditionally sailing vessels made to be disassembled for serving salt and exotic spices to guests for fine meals. Scott Rutherford, the ceramic artist on display, loved the idea of sculptures that could serve a functional purpose. He said, “This inspired me to create modern versions that would be sculptural objects that could be used functionally as drinking and food service sets. I want the vessels to be interesting sculptures that are proudly displayed when not in use.” When needed for a dinner or drinking party, these Nefs are disassembled to become a fully functional set of dishes. “I try to match the nationality of the vessel with the needs of the food or beverage to be served for the cuisine or occasion,” said Rutherford. This exhibition is free and open to the public from Wednesday to Saturday, 10am-5pm, and Sunday, 12-4pm. The exhibition will be on display in the gallery and retail space from April 12 through April 27.

This will be a special edition, celebrating the work and career of St. Pete muralist Derek Donnelly, aka Saint Paint Arts. Donnelly will be on hand to talk in detail about his 2018 mural on the walls of Suite E that was recently uncovered and inherited by a new wave of creatives, musicians, DJs, and artists upon moving into the space. Formerly the Law Office of Kevin T. Beck, and just being used as storage prior to its current iteration, the lawyer commissioned the piece based on inspiration from his favorite album, War's seminal classic "The World is a Ghetto." It's since been given new life and meaning as since opening to the public as Suite E Studios. An OG of the Sunshine City's well-known reputation as a vibrant and colorful arts destination covered in murals, Donnelly will also speak about his experience as a muralist in general, providing valuable insight for both established peers and emerging artists interested in getting into the local mural scene alike. A lost and forgotten relic of Old St. Pete, the mural captures a snapshot in time, incorporating both the artists themselves and the institutions of that period. Some of the places have been torn down or no longer exist in their previous form (RIP to the State Theatre, for instance), but many of the artists have gone on to greater heights in their careers, highlighting the importance and enduring nature of their talent and contributions to the city. Buildings come and go at the whims of business owners, city officials, and developers, while artists remain invested in their communities and where they live. Following the talk, we will be reimagining the mural by unveiling a new projection mapped experience of it, bringing the piece into 2025 and showcasing the potential future possibilities of the work, the space, and the collaborative spirit of our artist community.
