As the new year is born and realized, Kim Kirchman invites us to pause and take in the rituals of everyday life. Kirchman’s decorative and functional works ask the viewer to slow down and appreciate the things that take time. Her style is characterized by botanical details and earthy, color-rich palettes. The cold weather has blown down spectacular visitors. Shannon Owo Webb, Maxwell Henderson, Marlaina Lutz, and Tyler Quintin from the Red Lodge Clay Center in Montana will have work on display in our own middle gallery at the Morean Center for Clay. The quartet is in town for local workshops and firings and have graciously brought their artwork to share with St. Pete. The exhibitions are free and open to the public from Wednesday to Saturday, 10am-5pm. Always Becoming will be on display until February 1st, and the Red Lodge Clay Center Guest Show will stay up until March 1st.
