Through this exhibition, I redefine the dichotomy and convergencies of these two cultures. As a maker, I understand the significant weight the Chinese culture holds within ceramic history. Adversely, growing up in the Pennsylvania-Dutch area, my first exposure to the world of ceramics was folk pottery. The intent is to take inspiration of surface decoration, form, text, historical references and iconography from both cultures to depict an intersection of these parallels. Addressing these pieces gives me the opportunity to rationalize the acceptances and alienations felt through my experiences. As a result of this personal reflection, I am able to create tangible artifacts that the viewers can utilize and experience.
