Artist Conversation: Saturday, October 12th 5-6 pm. Join Babs Reingold and David Waterman for a lively conversation, moderated by curator Noel Smith. Three Tampa Bay-based artists explore various aspects of our changing urban environment in painting, drawing and sculpture, and photography. While untouched Florida landscapes are falling to development, our cities are also being reshaped. Scott Fisher’s freely painted canvases describe a world in flux. A cement pier built for interstate expansion resembles a strange thorny tree planted in a concrete island; a bright red “Wrong Way” sign bars entrance to a jungle of palmettos and mangroves. Babs Reingold’s graphite drawings of felled trees, and sculptural works featuring soft silken ladders that connect humans, animals and trees in a struggle to survive, suggest the existential and real poverty arising from the diminishment of our natural environment. David Waterman’s projected photographs of the open sky focus on dramatic cloudscapes, while his graphic closeups of road surfaces, constantly redrawn by traffic, attest to the accretion of daily acts that lead, inexorably and for better or worse, to lasting change. Open Air is collaboratively curated by Raheem Fitzgerald, Tony Palms, and Noel Smith. This exhibit is made possible thanks to the generosity of the Ruth and JO Stone Foundation.
